(Internation Day of Prayer and Awareness against Human Trafficking)

Human Trafficking

SERP – (The Sexual Exploitation Research and Policy Institute - Ireland's only independent research body dedicated to the study of commercial sexual exploitation) - in a recent report indicates more than 1,000 people are victims of this "modern day slavery" here in Ireland.

It is shocking to learn how girls and women are groomed by the traffickers. They are fooled into believing that they are coming to Ireland to get a good job, maybe in a hotel, hairdressers or a nail-bar or some other business.

Imagine, the trauma of arriving here, having your passport taken and being whisked away by strangers. You don't know the country or the language. Young women are beaten into prostitution. Without knowing the geography of the country, or even that Ireland exists, they are moved from place to place so that they have no anchor or friends.

In the case of drug trafficking, criminals can sell their product only once. But victims of human traffickers can be used repeatedly and sold on from one criminal gang to another. A woman is viewed as a commodity, and her person is diminished by reviews on escort websites.

It is incumbent on all of us to use our church networks and our congregational networks and to keep abreast of modern communication systems to further our mission of "bringing good news to the poor and liberty to captives."

Prayer is an integral part of our commitment. It gives us courage when we feel like giving up, when we feel we're getting nowhere, when we feel powerless. The struggle against human trafficking is not easy and is deeply uncomfortable and upsetting for all. Yet, as Jesus shows us, fidelity to God's mission often means standing firm in the face of resistance, trusting that the truth spoken in love, will in time bear fruit.
